The unconfing of banks. and disappe crange of administrators with the funds of large estates, and the discr der amid post-office accounts and deficits smid United States officials, have made a pestilence of crime that solemnizes every thoughtful man and woman and leads every philanthropist and Christian to ask What shall be done to stay the plague: There is a monsoon abroad, a typhoon, a strocco. I sometimes ask myself if it would not be better for men making wills to bequenth the property directly to the executors and officers of the court, and appoint the wislows and orphans a committee to see that the former got all that did not belong to them. The simple fact is, that there are a large number of men sailing yachts and driving fast horses and membors of expensive club houses and controlling country seats, who are not worth a dollar if they return to others their just rights. Under some sodden reverse they fail, and with afflicted air seem to retire from the world, and seem almost ready for monastic life, when in two or three years they blossom out again, hav ing compromised with their craditorspaid them nothing but regrets. and the only difference between the second chapter of prosperity and the first is that these things are possible. First of all, I charge the blame on careless, indifferent bank directors and boards having in charge great financial lestitu-tions.
